

California Coastal Cleanup Day

Celebrating African American Heritage & Stewardship of the Ocean

Saturday, September 15, 2012

9am - Noon

Santa Monica Beach at Bay Street

This Santa Monica beach site sometimes known as the "Inkwell", was a popular hangout for African Americans from the 1920s to the early 1960s, long after racial restrictions on public beaches were invalidated in 1927.

Coastal Cleanup Day gives us an amazing opportunity for action, education, and remembrance of our collective history.

We stand united by our love of the ocean. We remember the past and move forward together as stewards of this precious environment.

For a complete list of Coastal Cleanup Day sites or to register visit www.healthebay.org/ccd.

All cleanup supplies will be provided. Volunteers under 18 must have waiver signed by parent or guardian. Visit www.healthebay.org or call 310.451.1500 for more information.
