The Santa Monica Pier Paddleboard Race & Ocean Festival, presented by Tommy Bahama, celebrates the fun, challenges and history of ocean sports in Santa Monica. Catch paddleboard races, ocean swims, lifeguard dory boat competitions, youth activities and a full day of entertainment and education at the Santa Monica Pier.

Enjoy our “Museum for a Day” featuring a one-of-a-kind exhibition of historic surfboards, paddleboards, lifeguard equipment and skateboards. Meet surfing legends & authors of surf history.

Hula dance groups and live musicians will perform from the stage while spectators enjoy the races, museum and a large expo of paddleboards, accessories and souvenirs.

Santa Monica’s own Heal The Bay will receive a portion of net proceeds from the event. Heal The Bay will provide beach and ocean stewardship education to children and adults as well as offer up educational contests throughout the day.

Now one of the fastest growing sports in the county, paddleboarding’s roots date back to the historic paddleboard races that took place right here at the Santa Monica Pier from the 1930s to the 1950s.

Come cheer on the hundreds of waterman and women who are competing or just enjoy a rum drink in the Tommy Bahama lounge or a beer in the Sierra Nevada beer garden. It’s the best day of the year at the Santa Monica Pier.

Presented by Tommy Bahama, other major partners include Sierra Nevada, Honest Tea, Quickblade Paddles, SUP America Tour Presented By Natural Vines, Suplove, Chill Bar, Shore Hotel, KIIS-FM and 98.7 FM.

Special thanks to ZJ Boarding House, Pacific Park on the Santa Monica Pier, City TV, Santa Monica Daily Press, World Paddle Association, ProSUPshop, National Doryman’s Association and Santa Monica Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Paddleboarding becomes an official part of Santa Monica history when the Lifeguard Service adopts the wooden paddleboard as part of their lifesaving equipment. It is quickly adapted to recreational use by ocean enthusiasts.

On February 23, the Catalina to Santa Monica relay race makes headlines as a premiere team paddleboarding event ending at the Pier. The race becomes an annual event.

On July 20, the first all-women paddleboard program is staged at Pier, hosted by Santa Monica’s own Hui Māoli Paddleboard Club.

The first official Santa Monica paddleboard race is organized inside the confines of the newly christened Santa Monica Yacht Harbor next to the Pier.

Legendary watermen Tom Blake and Pete Peterson begin crafting their own paddle boards. In 1932, the two of them along with fellow waterman Wally Burton paddle 27 miles from Santa Monica to Catalina Island on custom made paddleboards.

Surfing aficionados credit Nick Gabaldon as California’s first documented surfer of African and Mexican American descent. A skilled recreational surfer, his legacy has inspired many, especially surfers of color. Born Nicolas Rolando “Nick” Gabaldon, Jr. in Los Angeles, California to parents, Cecilia and Nicolas Gabaldon Sr., he grew up in Santa Monica.

A 1945 Santa Monica High School graduate, Gabaldon was one of the few African American students matriculating at the school during this era. He served in the United States Navy from 1945 – 1946. Upon returning home, he emerged as an honor student and writer at Santa Monica College and worked as a U.S. Postal Service Letter Carrier.

As a teenager Gabaldon began surfing at Santa Monica’s Bay Street beach. Anglos referencing the skin color of the beach-goers who visited the area derogatorily called this beach, the “Inkwell.” He and other African Americans in Southern California, however, transformed the hateful moniker into a badge of pride.

A handsome, athletic and well-liked young man, he taught himself to surf using the 13-foot rescue surfboard of a white lifeguard he befriended at the Inkwell. He honed and challenged his surfing skills 12 miles north at the famed, Malibu Beach. To get there and back, he paddled those full 12 miles.

Although he experienced a common bond in the water among the surfing community, prejudice was not far away on land or in the ocean. He was called derogatory names by some white beachgoers but rarely by fellow surfers. Nonetheless he exhibited the courage and dedication to be a participant in this particular sport heretofore associated mainly with white Southern Californians and the people of the South Pacific.

Gabaldon died in a surfing accident at the Malibu Pier in 1951 at age 24. Although little is known about the details of his life, it is his passion, athleticism, discipline, and love and respect for the ocean that live on as the quintessential qualities of the California surfer. His legacy offers an empowering story of the pursuit of freedom and of self-fulfillment.

In 2008, the City of Santa Monica officially recognized surfer Nick Gabaldon and the “Inkwell,” with a landmark monument at Bay Street and Oceanfront Walk. In recent years the Black Surfers Collective have joined other groups for a beach celebration honoring those who have come before us on Nick Gabaldon Day, the first Saturday of June.

Alison Rose Jefferson was a consultant on the Nick Gabaldon Day, June 1, 2013 event. She is a featured historian in the documentary films about African American surfers, “White Wash” and “12 Miles North: The Nick Gabaldon Story.” Her website, “Celebrating the California Dream: A Look at Forgotten Stories” is at www.alisonrosejefferson.com. This article incorporates an encyclopedia entry about Nick Gabaldon co-written by Jefferson and Rick Blocker published at www.BlackPast.org, an online reference guide to African American history.
